
Nina Onyskevitch, RD

MAL Professional Standards

Nina is a Registered Dietitian and Certified Diabetes Educator from Saskatchewan. Nina currently works as the Aboriginal Diabetes Initiative Community Dietitian working with the First Nations and Inuit Health Branch.

Nina started her career as a community dietitian with the Meadow Lake Tribal Council, working with the Aboriginal Diabetes Initiative and Canada Prenatal nutrition Program. However Meadow Lake was never 'north' enough so she leapt at the opportunity to move to Yellowknife. In Yellowknife she worked as Nutrition Project Coordinator with the Government of the Northwest Territories, travelling across the Northwest Territories on a variety of projects focusing on early childhood nutrition and building and sustaining life skills and traditional food ways.

However north is only fun when family is there too, so in 2014 she moved back home to Saskatchewan and worked as a community dietitian with the File Hills Qu'Appelle Tribal Council with a focus on childhood nutrition and diabetes in pregnancy. Nina lives in White City with her husband and very precocious young daughter.